Utah In Review - 1980

Tax burdens and the depressed state of the economy ranked high among Utahns' major concerns in 1980. The year began with the Legislature enacting an extension and expansion of the program of property tax rebates passed in 1979. As the year ended, the Legislature in emergency session postponed for one year the implementation of the tax relief program. The program was killed outright by the regular 1981 session of the Legislature.

Early in 1980 movements to further and permanently reduce both property and sales taxes through use of the initiative petition appeared to be gathering strength. Two petitions were being circulated and both received sufficient signatures to obtain places on the November ballot: one proposing a property tax limitation similar to California's Proposition 13, the other mandating removal of the statewide 4% sales tax from food items. However, by the time election day rolled around, concern over the economy and the state of Utah finances had grown to the point that both of these initiative petitions were rejected by the voters.

For the second consecutive year, the Governor in 1980 ordered a reduction in allocations to state departments and agencies in order to forestall a possible deficit in the general fund. The special legislative session in December 1980, in addition to postponing the property tax rebate program, extended the cutback in allocations to the public school program, something the Governor could not do by executive order. The Legislature went beyond the Governor's recommended 2½% reduction in school allocations and voted a 3½% reduction, and also increased the Governor's 2½% cutbacks of departmental allocations to 3½%. As Utah moved into 1981 the state appeared to be in sound financial condition and there was no discernible feeling of panic. However, it appeared clear that the era of surpluses in the state's major funds was definitely over and that belt-tightening would be necessary in setting most state agency budgets in 1981 and the years immediately beyond. This was emphasized by the Governor's submitting a restricted budget to the 1981 Legislature and by the Legislature's action in cutting an additional $50 million from the Governor's proposal.

EDUCATION

While the continuing paradox of spiralling inflation and a depressed economy affected Utah's financial position, along with the rest of the nation, another significant factor in Utah's budget squeeze was the accelerating rise in the cost of education, particularly the public schools.

Elementary school enrollments have increased sharply in recent years. Projections indicate that enrollment growth will continue through the next decade, affecting secondary as well as elementary schools and in time reaching the campuses of the higher institutions.

The current experience is reminiscent of that when the post-war "baby boom" passed through Utah's educational system in the 1950's and 1960's. However, the enrollment surge expected in the 1980's appears to be significantly larger than the earlier one. Fall enrollments in Utah public schools for the academic year 1980-81 totalled 342,885, an increase of 10,310 over 1979-80. On the basis of recorded births and current in-migration trends, an increase of more than 14,000 over 1980-81 figures is expected next fall. By 1984-85 the year-to-year increase is projected at more than 21,600 and is expected to remain above 20,000 for a number of succeeding years. By way of comparison, the peak year-to-year enrollment increase in the earlier school growth period was 13,799 in the fall of 1964.

Reasons for the current enrollment surge are well known: Utah's high birth rate (approximately double that of the nation) and the record rate of in-migration to the state in the 1970's which appears to be continuing. Neither of these factors is expected to decline in the immediate future, and the rate of in-migration could increase significantly, depending on such things as accelerated energy development and the possible locating of a part of the proposed MX missile basing in Utah.

Obviously, increased school enrollment will entail increased expenditures to operate Utah's uniform school support program. Assuming that appropriations for school support will continue at the same rate as in the recent past and that inflation will continue at a 10% annual rate, it is projected that the cost of the Utah public school program will rise from the $503 million appropriated in 1980 to $1 billion in the 1984-85 school year, $2 billion in 1988-89, and $2.8 billion in 1990-91.

The above figures refer only to the operation and maintenance costs of the expanding program. In addition, Utah faces the problem of housing the larger numbers of students. It is estimated that the cost of new school construction would be close to $2 billion over the next decade if traditional patterns of construction and allocation of space are followed. Utah legislators and educators were busy in 1980 seeking alternatives to constructing new schools---including such things as double sessions, year-round schools, limited bussing of students, and others---that might reduce the cost of new construction by $800 million or more. While past opinion polls have shown such alternatives to be unpopular, many observers feel that rising costs of government and the implication of increased tax burdens will make the alternatives more acceptable to taxpaying citizens.

Utah stands at or near the top of the list of states in terms of taxpayer effort to support public education. Rankings of the states by percent of personal income going to support public education in 1978-79 show Utah first in support of higher education and second to Alaska in support of local schools and in total support of public education at all levels.

Education continued to be the No. 1 category of Utah state spending in fiscal 1980, accounting for 41% of all general state expenditure. Social Services (including public welfare, corrections, public health, mental health, employment security, unemployment benefits, and related areas) was the second-largest expenditure category in 1980, accounting for 25% of the state total. Third largest state expenditure category was transportation, representing 15% of the total. Included under "transportation" were not only expenditures for highway construction, maintenance, and administration, but also those for aeronautics and transportation-related operations.

HIGHWAYS AND TRANSPORTATION

Utah's transportation fund (formerly highway construction fund) continued to feel a double impact from inflation in 1980. Rising costs of motor fuel induced people to use more fuel-efficient vehicles, to drive less, and sometimes to eliminate the use of things such as recreational vehicles and boats. The net result was to reduce the amount of motor fuel purchased and correspondingly reduce the amount of tax collected for the transportation fund. At the same time, the price of asphalt---a petroleum product which is a major factor in highway construction and maintenance---was rising at two-and-one-half times the rate of the consumer price index.

By 1980 the effect of the two-cents-a-gallon increase in the motor fuels tax enacted in 1978 had been effectively nullified by the double inflationary squeeze. Effective purchasing power of the Utah Department of Transportation in 1980 was less than in 1969, although the department had more than twice as many nominal dollars in 1980 as in 1969. As a result the state's major highway rehabilitation program, including such things as extensive resurfacing of worn highways, had to be discontinued in 1980. The 1981 Legislature, after initially refusing a motor fuels tax increase, approved an additional two-cent-a-gallon boost in the tax in the closing hours of the session, and expressly reserved revenues from the increase for the highway rehabilitation program.

Federal-aid highway construction in Utah did move ahead in 1980, as the state was able to provide matching funds for the projects (90% federally-funded on the average). More than $106 million was obligated on federal-aid highway projects in Utah in the 1980 calendar year, with about $82 million of that total going for interstate construction. An additional 11.5 miles of the Interstate Highway System in Utah were completed in 1980, and at the end of the year 713.7 miles of the state's 937.3 miles of interstate construction (76%) were completed.

Total highway expenditure in Utah in fiscal 1980 was $220.8 million.

Mass transit operations in the three counties (Salt Lake, Davis, and Weber) served by the Utah Transit Authority were also affected by the rapid advance of inflation, especially in petroleum and petroleum products. The Transit Authority requested the Legislature to authorize it to place a tax increase proposal before the voters of the district, but the request was denied.

The rapid rise in mass transit ridership observed in recent years in Utah was sharply curtailed in 1980. However, completion of the Transit Authority's Meadowbrook storage and service facility and anticipated delivery of a number of new busses in 1981 were expected to improve the mass transportation picture in the coming year.

PUBLIC WELFARE

The rapid increase in expenditure for public assistance in Utah in recent years was abruptly slowed in 1980. Total outlays for public assistance in fiscal 1980 (including medical assistance but excluding expenditures for administration and for social services) was $130.3 million, less than 1.5% above the $128.4 million figure for 1979. From 1975 to 1979 annual increase in public assistance spending in Utah had averaged 17.4%.

Most of the increase in recent years has been in the area of medical assistance (Medicaid), especially in nursing home care. Between 1975 and 1979 state expenditure for Medicaid increased more than 25% a year, with most of the increase attributable to nursing home payments. A number of policy and procedural changes were effected by state welfare administrators in 1980 to improve controls over expenditure for Medicaid, and the 1979-1980 increase in Medicaid outlays was held to 2.8%.

The continued depressed state of the economy put increasing pressure on the public assistance program in 1980, and the pressures were strong as 1981 got under way.

However, the 1981 Legislature sharply cut departmental requests for public assistance funds and some social workers predicted serious problems in the coming year unless there should be an unexpected sharp upturn in the economy.

POPULATION

The decennial census conducted in 1980

fully confirmed what had been indicated on the basis of unofficial population estimates of recent years. Utah's growth in the 1970-1980 decade was greater (in percentage as well as in numbers) than that of any ten-year period since statehood. Utah's rate of growth from 1970 to 1980 was the fifth highest among the 50 states.

Utah's 1980 census count was 1,461,037, a 37.9% increase over the 1970 figure of 1,059,273. Utah's growth rate was more than three times the national average and ranked behind only those of Nevada, Arizona, Florida, and Wyoming. On the basis of the official 1980 count, it appeared certain that Utah will be awarded a third seat in the U.S. House of Representatives.

Population of the United States was 226,504,825 in 1980, an 11.4% increase over the 203,302,031 counted in 1970.

Most of the U. S. growth in the decade was in the West and the South. Of the 20 fastest-growing states, 18 were in the West (12) or South (6). Only New Hampshire (13th) and Oklahoma (19th) of the top 20 were not in one of those geographical regions. Two states, New York and Rhode Island, actually lost population over the course of the decade, while Massachusetts and Pennsylvania registered marginal gains of less than 1%. The District of Columbia was the biggest loser of population, with 15.7% fewer residents in 1980 than in 1970.

In Utah, the population growth was not uniform throughout the state. Emery County's 1980 population was more than double that of 1970. Washington County showed 90% growth in the decade, while Summit and Duchesne Counties each grew more than 70%. No county in Utah lost population, but growth rates in Weber, Piute, and Daggett Counties were below 16%. Salt Lake County's growth rate (35.0%) was slightly below the state average, while Utah County's 58.3% was significantly above the average.

Fastest-growing Utah municipalities in the 1970-80 decade were Sandy and West Jordan in Salt Lake County. Sandy's population increased nearly seven-fold and West Jordan's six-fold. Washington City in Washington County grew to four times its 1970 size. Castle Dale, expanding 3.5 times, and Huntington, growing to 2.7 times its 1970 size, were typical of the population surge in Emery County.

Orem was the largest Utah city to double its growth in the decade, while near-by Provo grew 39% larger. Salt Lake City and Ogden, Utah's two largest cities, each lost in population, although their surrounding suburban areas grew significantly.

COST OF LIVING

Inflation continued its rapid climb in 1980. The cost of living, as measured by the Bureau of Labor Statistics' Consumer Price Index, rose 13.5% in 1980, marking the second consecutive year of double-digit inflation. The CPI average for 1979 was 11.3% above that for 1978. The index (base: 1967=100) averaged 246.7 for 1980 and 217.4 for 1979.

While the accuracy of the CPI as a measure of inflation has been challenged, there was no question that the impact of inflation was severe in 1980, and was more or less painfully felt by most citizens.

Some categories of expenditure, and some individual items, experienced much more rapid inflationary advances than are reflected by the all-items index, while other categories lagged behind the average.

Based on 1980 mid-year estimates, the 1980 index for fuel oil and coal was 559.6, two-and-one-half times the figure for the all-items index. The index for home ownership was 317.9 and that for gas and electricity, 311.6, both substantially above the all-items figure. The rental index, however, was 191.6, 23% below the all items average. The 1980 index for apparel and upkeep was 176.7, 28% below the all-items index.

The index for medical care, which for a considerable time was in the forefront of the inflationary advance, was 265.7 in 1980, only 7% above the all-items figure.

PERSONAL INCOME

Per capita personal income in Utah was $7,456 in 1980, compared to $9,463 for the entire United States. In Utah, per capita personal income rose 7% from the 1979 figure of $6,967, while the national average increase was 10% above the $8,604 figure for 1979.

In Utah as in the United States as a whole, the 1979-80 increase in per capita personal income was significantly less than the advance of inflation (13.5%), indicating that 1980 personal income was down from 1979 in terms of real dollars. In both Utah and the nation as a whole, however, per capita personal income increased faster than inflation over the 1975-1980 period.

Utah stood 45th among the 50 states in terms of per capita personal income in 1979 and has not ranked higher than 40th in this category since 1971. A significant factor in Utah's relatively low rank in per capita income is the unusually large families that are common in Utah. On an income-per-wage earner scale, Utah would rank considerably higher.

In the late 1920's and at various times since, Utah has ranked as high as 29th among the states in personal income, but has not ranked this high since 1964. Utah per capita personal income was 90% of the national average in 1962 but has not been as high since that time. In 1980 Utah's per capita personal income was 78.8% of the national average.

SOURCE: Compiled by UTAH FOUNDATION from records of the Utah State Tax Commission.

Because of the delay in remitting the sales tax to the State Tax Commission, the data actually reflect business operations during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1980.
* Net local sales tax collections are amounts remitted to local units after deduction of 2% for administrative expenses.
Includes "Outside Above Municipalities" for each of the counties except Morgan County. All of Morgan County is included because there are no local unit collections.

* Excludes expenditures for administration and for social services.

 Beginning in January, 1974, money payments for old-age assistance, aid to the blind, and aid to the disabled were paid directly by the Federal Social Security Office.

Prior to fiscal 1962, medical assistance expenditures are not shown separately. Such medical expenditures are included in program expenditures for these earlier years.

Prepared by UTAH FOUNDATION from reports of the Utah Department of Social Services.

NOTE: Detail will not add to total state-wide average because levies for municipalities and special districts apply only to a portion of the total valuation.
* Average total levy of all special districts in those areas having such districts.
 Prior to 1953 special district levies were included with municipal levies.

* No new assessment level ratios were published for the indicated counties. Tax Commission report notes that these counties were in the process of being reappraised and that "any attempt to conduct a meaningful ratio analysis would have been futile".

 Kane County was revalued in 1980. However, because of a court decision, the old valuations were used another year, and the assessment level indicated here was not used.

Prepared by UTAH FOUNDATION from Assessment-Sales Analysis of Locally-Assessed Real Property report published by the Local Valuation Division of the Utah State Tax Commission, Salt Lake City, Utah, 1970, 1972, 1974, 1976, 1978, 1979, and 1980 editions.

*In some municipalities more than one levy may be applied within the corporate boundaries of the city. Levy shown is that which is imposed in the main part of the city.

Includes library tax

#In the year that property is revalued under the Tax Commission equalization program, mill levy for operations must be adjusted downward.

##Although Kane County was revalued in 1980, the new assessments were not used because of a court order.

EXPLANATION OF PROPERTY TAX TABLES

The remaining tables in this section (pages 73 - 98) provide detailed information about property tax assessed valuations, mill levies, taxes charged, and total levies imposed by all taxing units within Utah.

During 1980 there were 464 separate governmental units that could levy a property tax. This included 29 counties, 40 school districts, 223 cities and towns, and 173 special districts. Because of the overlapping boundaries of some of these districts, there were a total of 719 separate taxing areas in the state. There were, for example, 156 different taxing areas in Weber County, 139 in Salt Lake County and 59 in Davis County. Conceivably, a different overall tax levy could be imposed in each of these separate taxing areas.

Any tabular presentation of these data will, of course, involve a number of problems and complexities. The tables which follow present detailed property tax data for the various taxing districts and taxing areas of the state. A simple summary of the property tax mill levies imposed in the major cities and towns of Utah during 1980 and selected earlier years is shown by the table found on page 71 of this publication.

In order to use the detailed tables, it is necessary to know the specific geographic location of the property for which the information is being sought. This may be established from the tax notice (providing that the various units which are authorized to impose the tax are listed on the tax notice) or by inquiry at the county offices.

The following explanation describes what is contained in these tables:

Column 1 lists the governmental unit levying the tax and the taxing area in those cases where there may be more than one overall tax levy imposed within a taxing jurisdiction. The taxing area usually is designated by a series of code letters following the name of the municipality or school district. Each code letter refers to some special taxing district which is authorized to impose a property tax. Thus, "Beaver Schools - A" refers to the unincorporated area of the Beaver School District within Beaver County which is also within the boundaries of Beaver County Special Service District #1 (Fire Protection)-A.

Column 2 shows the assessed value of all taxable property within the taxing jurisdiction or within the taxing area.

Column 3 lists the mill levy imposed by the taxing jurisdiction.

Column 4 lists the property taxes charged by the taxing jurisdiction. This was obtained by multiplying the assessed valuation in column 2 by the mill levy in column 3.

Column 5 lists the total property tax levy imposed during 1980 by all taxing jurisdictions which have authority to levy a property tax within the taxing area. This would include the county levy, the school district levy, the city or town levy (if any), and all special district levies (if any). The levy is expressed in terms of mills, or dollars of tax per $1,000 assessed valuation.

Columns 6 - 10 list the combined property tax levy imposed within the taxing jurisdiction during a number of selected prior years (1979, 1975, 1970, 1960, and 1950).

a/ The code letter (Z) refers to property in the Central Weber Sewer District (code B) that is exempt from the tax imposed by the district as a result of a court order.

* Because of the overlapping boundaries of the various special districts in the state, more than one levy may apply within a municipality or school district. For example, 16 different overall mill levies are applied within Ogden City and 13 different levies are found in Salt Lake City. Actually there are 139 different taxing areas in Salt Lake County, 156 in Weber county, and 59 in Davis County. In the preceding county tabulations, the different taxing areas are designated by one or more code letters following the name of the municipality or school district. Each code letter refers to some special taxing district which imposes or is authorized to impose a levy within the district. Thus, "Weber Schools - A,B,J,K" refers to the taxing area in the Weber School District (outside of any incorporated city or town) which is in the Weber Basin Water District (A), Central Weber Sewer District (B), the Bona Vista Water District (J), and the Weber County Mosquito District (K). Of course, in addition to these taxing districts levies, the countywide levies for state schools and county purposes are applied in the described taxing area. In the case of Weber County only, the code letter (Z) refers to property located within the boundaries of the Central Weber Sewer District which is exempt from the tax levied by the district.
